what is Outplacement?

Nowadays, career transition has become an integral part of our professional lives and it affects all sectors and all levels of hierarchy. The career transition following the end of a collaboration, especially when it is unplanned such as is the case of a redundancy. This is one of the most difficult, even shocking sometimes, experiences for all parties involved: the employer, the colleagues who stay, and of course the employee who is leaving.

Outplacement is a professional program sponsored by a company to its departing employees, as part of company's Corporate Social Responsibility. It is delivered by Outplacement Specialists and the main objective of Outplacement is to assist and support all parties involved in handling effectively such a difficult situation: the employer in handling the entire process; the employees who stay in reducing uncertainty; and most importantly/primarily the departing employees in dealing positively with career transition and in finding their next position as soon as possible.

when do companies offer Outplacement?

Companies offer Outplacement programs to departing employees as an extra benefit in addition to the departing severance package. This applies mostly in cases of separation due to organizational reorganization, economical restructuring, merger & acquisition, of activities' reduction or company closure.

"In addition to the 'severance compensation package' and as an act of corporate social responsibility, 'BNP Paribas Personal Finance' chose to offer 'Outplacement' programs to all its personnel, from entry-level to top executives."

Sylvie Zikos, Human Resources Manager BNP Paribas Personal Finance

our outplacement approach “building the next step”

how does Randstad handle Outplacement programs?

We offer professional programs based on a quality approach and a researched 5 steps® methodology tailored for each program accordingly to the company's requirements and participants' individual needs. Our commitment to the employer as well as to the outplacement participant is that we handle each case as unique with empathy, professionalism and discretion.

The key requirement of a successful outplacement program is the employees' acceptance and willingness to actively participate.

Our target is to 'support participants to help themselves'. Thus, through our programs we aim at facilitating the situation by providing positive, realistic and feasible alternatives. While we recognise the importance of a quick professional reinsertion, our main responsibility is to deliver proper guidance in the search of the most suitable position, taking advantage of all available means, and of course the Randstad extensive network of contacts and clients.

We offer individual as well as group (more than 10 participants) outplacement programs.
